

Write this page.

VOL. XVI, NO. 23
Price 5 cts.; Per Year, $1.50

NEW YORK, JUNE 10, 1899.

Copyright 1899 by the
Funk & Wagnalls Company

Why Booth Shot President Lincoln

New Light Thrown on That Great Tragedy by the Personal Papers of a Surgeon in North Carolina

By D. F. St. Clair

THE exclamation—"Sic semper tyrannis!"—uttered by John Wilkes Booth, on the stage of Ford's Theater, just after shooting President Lincoln, has always been taken to indicate, as the motive for the deed, resentment over the failure of the Confederate cause. Booth, it was known, was strongly in sympathy with the South, and the collapse of the Confederacy was supposed to have worked him into a frenzy. This view of his motive also helped to aggravate and prolong the bitterness of the war and the passions of the reconstruction period, for the claim was made at the time and widely believed that well-known Southern leaders had encouraged Booth to the murder.

It now transpires that Booth had another and a more personal motive inciting him to the deed. The story is told in the papers of the late Dr. George A. Foote, a well-known surgeon of North Carolina, who died recently in Warrenton, of that state. From Mr. George A. Foote, Jr., I get the facts disclosed in those papers, and have every reason, because of Dr. Foote's high character, to place implicit reliance upon the statements therein made.

Dr. Foote was a surgeon in the Confederate adjoining cell was incarcerated Capt. John Young Beall, a well-educated young Virginian of an excellent family. Beall's execution as a guerrilla and a spy on the 6th of February, 1865, on Governors Island is said to have been the cause of Booth's shooting the President. It is therefore well to recall some of the facts of Beall's history.

In 1862 Beall joined the Confederate navy, and was appointed acting commander in 1863. That year he went to Canada and joined the Confederates, waging a border and guerrilla war upon the United States under the leadership of Jacob Thompson and Clement C. Clay, Jr. Beall and his followers operated in citizen's clothing, and in this way managed often to make raids into New York state and escape without being detected. On Sept. 19, 1864, he and his men boarded the Lake Erie steamer Philo Parsons in the character of passengers. At a signal they all produced arms, and, acting under the orders of Beall, they seized the boat, driving all hands below as prisoners. They then captured and subsequently sank another boat, the Island Queen. On the night of Dec. 15, 1864, Beall and his men attempted to wreck a train near Buffalo. On the next day the whole force was arrested at Suspension Bridge, N. Y., and brought to Government. But Captain Beall claimed that he was acting under the authority of the Confederate government and was entitled to the rights of a prisoner of war. He was allowed to correspond with the authorities at Richmond, by virtue of the proclamation of Jefferson Davis, under date of Dec. 24, 1864, certifying that the Confederate government assumed "the responsibility of answering for the conduct and acts of any of its officers engaged in said expedition," namely, that in which Beall was concerned.

A military commission with Brig-Gen. Fitz-henry Warren as president and Maj. John A. Balls as judge advocate-general was convened at Fort Lafayette for the trial of Beall. He was ably defended by James T. Brady, a lawyer who made his reputation defending Confederate prisoners in New York during the war. The trial settled adversely Beall's claims to the rights of a prisoner of war, for it was clearly proven that he acted not only as a guerrilla in civilian clothing, but that he had done the work of a spy. His execution was deemed to be a pressing necessity, both from a military and a civil point of view, and he was sentenced to be hanged on Feb. 6, 1865.

There existed between John Wilkes Booth and Captain Beall the strongest sort of personal attachment. They were together in school at Baltimore. The two young men were subsequently roommates at a college in Virginia, and Booth was a frequent visitor at Beall's home. Beall had been a "promoter" for Booth in his stage career, helping him financially as well as in other ways. While Beall was under sentence, Governor Andrews, of Massachusetts, was doing all he could for the young officer's release. Other very influential persons went to see Mr. Lincoln in his behalf, but it was Booth who worked day and night for his friend.

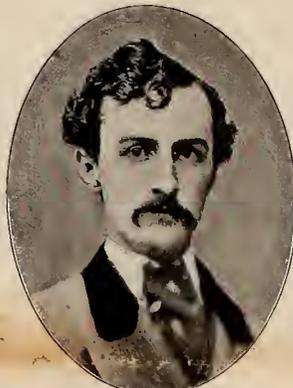

Booth came often to Beall's cell, and Dr. Foote was taken into their confidence. On one occasion Booth came in great glee to see his friend, and reported that he had just returned from Washington, where he was permitted to see the President. He had fallen on his knees before Mr. Lincoln, so he reported, and with tears in his eyes had pleaded for the life of his friend. He said that Mr. Lincoln had promised him that Beall should be saved.

When, however, it was seen that Beall was to be executed, Booth set about to effect an escape. Dr. Foote was a party to the plans. Two efforts were made, but in vain. A dark night and bribery of the keepers was relied upon. Booth had many wealthy friends in the city, and could command any amount of money at that time, for he was not only one of the most popular actors on the stage, but he had the confidence of all who knew him well. Nevertheless his efforts resulted in naught.

On Sunday, Feb. 6, the order was executed, and Beall was hanged within 30 yards of Dr. Foote's window, inside Fort Columbus, and not at Johnson's Island, as has been so often reported.

Booth came to New York on the morning of Beall's execution, and, being so grievously disappointed at what had occurred, he became, according to Dr. Foote's story, really an insane man. For what he termed the perfidy of President Lincoln toward himself and his friend Beall he at once swore to avenge his friend's death by killing both Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Seward, for the latter he held to be largely responsible for the President's course in this affair. Dr. Foote says he himself had no knowledge at the time of Booth's purpose to murder the President. Booth confided this to only one man, and that only an hour before the assassination. The man to whom he thus confided his purpose begged him not to carry it out; and finding that Booth was not to be turned from his revenge, left the city before the terrible tragedy occurred. Dr. Foote does not state who this confidant was nor how he (Dr. Foote) came to know about him. The probability is that Dr. Foote's long silence has been due to apprehension that he himself, if the story were told, would be held to have been an accomplice in the crime.

(Continued on page 15.)

JOHN WILKES BOOTH

[From a hitherto unpublished photograph loaned by J. E. Taylor]

THE MILITARY COMMISSION THAT TRIED THE CONSPIRATORS

[From a photograph loaned by James E. Taylor]

Standing: M. Harris, Lew Wallace, August Kautz (brother of the admiral), and Col. Henry Burnett
Seated: Col. David B. Choddenning, Col. Charles H. Tompkins, Col. Albion P. Horne, James A. Eakin, Daniel B. Hunter, Robert C. Foster, John A. Bingham, Joseph Holt

ate army, and some time in the latter part of 1864 was captured and imprisoned in Fort Columbus, on Governors Island, N. Y. In the northern part of the state, and it was determined to make an example of them in sequently roommates at a college in Virginia, and Booth was a frequent visitor at Beall's home. Beall had been a "pro-

Why Booth Shot President Lincoln

(Concluded from page 1.)

Booth, it is said, did not intend to shoot the President in the theater; but the contemplated opportunity did not offer itself elsewhere. But for the fact, says Dr. Foote, that Booth's spur caught in the curtain that fatal night he would have escaped—at least for a time. The failure of the Confederate cause had nothing to do with the assassination of the President; it was due simply to revenge engendered by Booth's love for his friend.

Whether this account is true or not, it may be added that the late Dr. Foote has not left a friend or acquaintance in his were fulfilled. So far Colonel Forney's story tallies closely with Dr. Foote's. The colonel, however, stated that Booth had several accomplices—Harold, Atzerodt, and others—who were to assassinate Seward. According to Dr. Foote, Booth had no accomplices. From the nature of the case it is improbable that either Colonel Forney or Dr. Foote speaks from any personal knowledge on that particular point.

Perseverance of Demosthenes

THE story of the struggles and perseverance of Demosthenes to succeed as an orator has been told again and again, but is worth repeating. He had a weak voice, an impediment in his speech, and very short breath. His audiences often in the first days of his oratorical experience hissed him off the stage; but he persevered. He stammered to such a degree that he could scarcely pronounce some words at all. To overcome these obstacles, he put small pebbles in his mouth and pronounced the difficult words. He also practised speaking while going up steep and difficult places, so that his breath might be tried. He went to the seaside, and in the face of the most violent seas delivered orations to accustom himself to the roar of assemblies and people who might object to his speeches. He took no less care of his actions than of his voice. He practised before a looking-glass to check himself gesture. To correct an ungraceful habit of shrugging his shoulders, he practised standing upright in a kind of narrow pulpit over which hung a spear in such a manner that if, in the heat of action, he should shrug his shoulders the point of the weapon would admonish him of the fact.

From Our Friends

F. H. Leonard, Buffalo, N. Y.: "THE NEW VOICE is just what I want my boy to read." T. S. Sunderland, Denver, Colo.: "I have received THE NEW VOICE, and think it is a great improvement; not only the mechanical construction, but the literary part as well." Rev. J. W. Webb, Fresno, Cal.: "I believe you are correct. We must get Prohibition party papers into thousands of non-Prohibition party homes. We must make temperance and Prohibition sentiment to demand and enforce prohibitory law faster than we are doing. THE NEW VOICE is well calculated to do this."

ROGER'S SCARE

When this queer bird came o'er the hill, In terror Roger fled; But 'twas only Silas Hayseed with A meal-sack on his head!

If you have Smoked too Much Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. W. H. Fiske, Le Sueur, Minn., says: "It is a grand remedy in excessive use of tobacco." Relieves the depression caused thereby, and induces refreshing sleep.

$30,000 REWARD

DESCRIPTION

JOHN WILKES BOOTH!

Who Assassinated the PRESIDENT on the Evening of April 14th, 1865.

Height 4 feet 8 inches, weight 160 pounds; compact build; hair jet black, inclined to curl, medium length, parted behind, eyes black, and heavy dark eye-brows; wears a large seal ring on little finger, whose talking inclines his head forward; looks down.

Description of the Person who Attempted to Assassinate Hon. W. H. Seward, Secretary of State.

Height 8 feet 1 in.; hair black, thick, full and straight; no beard, nor appearance of beard, shows not on the jaws; face moderately full; 22 or 23 years of age; eyes, color not known—large eyes, not prominent; nose not heavy, but thick; feet not large, but rather round, complexion healthy; nose straight and well formed, medium size; mouth small, lips thin; upper lip prominent when he talked; chin pointed and prominent; head medium size; neck short, and of medium length; hands soft and small; fingers tapering; shows no signs of hard labor; broad shoulders; taper waist; straight figure; strong looking man; manner not gentlemanly, but vulgar. Overcoat double-breasted, color mixed of pink and grey spots, small—was a suit overcoat, pockets in side and one on the breast, with huggles or flaps; pants black, smooth shod; new heavy boots; voice small and thin, inclined to roar.

The Common Council of Washington, D. C., have offered a reward of $20,000 for day arrest and conviction of these Assassins, in addition to which I will pay $10,000.

L. C. BAKER, Colonel and Agent War Department.

FACSIMILE OF THE DESCRIPTION OF BOOTH CARRIED BY MAJOR MURPHY, AND CAPTURED THE SQUAD BY WHICH THE ASSASSIN WAS CAPTURED (AND SHOT). THIS WAS REPRODUCED FROM THE ACTUAL CIRCULAR CARRIED BY DOBNEY, WHICH WAS LOANED "THE NEW VOICE" BY JAMES E. TAYLOR

native state who would not readily vouch for his high character.

The above story by Dr. Foote corroborates statements made by the late Colonel Forney less than a month after Lincoln's assassination. Colonel Forney, in his paper, the Washington Chronicle (May 10, 1865), tells of Booth's desperate efforts to save the life of Beall. He interested McLean, of the Cincinnati Enquirer, at that time in Washington, and Senator Eugene Hale, of Maine, in his endeavors, and Colonel Forney himself was induced to write a letter to the President in Beall's behalf. Finally, according to Forney, McLean, Hale, and Booth called on the President after midnight, and until 4 A.M. Booth pleaded for a pardon. The scene is described as a most pathetic one, and in the course of it Booth confessed that he and some of his friends had a short time before formed a conspiracy, meeting at the house of Mrs. Surratt, to kidnap the President and hold him as a hostage for the release of certain military prisoners.

The result of the interview, according to Forney, as according to Dr. Foote, was the President's promise to save Beall's life. But when Seward was the next morning informed of the promise, he protested, finally threatening to leave the cabinet if the promise

Valuable Books for Thoughtful Readers

"Reading Maketh a Full Man."

Living Problems in Religion and Social Science.

Condensed sermons and practical papers dealing with vital questions of the day. By Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., M.A. Cloth, 12mo, 301 pp. Price, $1.25.

Religion News and Observer: "Every point is urged home by the narration of some incident. . . . Remarkable for the boldness and vividness with which they are portrayed."

Culture and Religion in Some of Their Relations.

suggestive material on the most important relations between Culture and Religion, especially indicating the true aims of modern culture. By Prof. John Campbell Sharp, 8vo, 85 pp. Paper, 15 cents.

Baptist Family Magazine: "In an age when culture is becoming more and more general it is important that the relations of religion and culture be rightly understood; this book most ably supplies the want."

Is Man Too Prolific?

By H. S. Pomeroy, M.D. (author of "The Ethics of Marriage"). 12mo, leatherette, 61 pp. 35 cents.

Hon. W. E. Gladstone in letter to the Author: "I can find no words strong enough to express my sense of the sacredness of the cause to which your labors are devoted; or of the degradation which, if and in proportion as that cause should be defeated, threatens the whole human race within the scope of the controversy."

Ethical Teachings in Old English Literature.

It emphasizes the ethical and Christian element in the foremost of the old English authors, presenting typical selections and quotations. By Prof. Theodore W. Hunt, Princeton. Cloth, 12mo, 385 pp. Price, $1.25.

The Plain Dealer, Cleveland: "It deals with a feature in the history of early English Literature which is only incidentally touched upon in other works on the subject, and therefore has an undeniable value."

Scientific Sophisms.

Some original views on the various theories of evolution, calculated to remove skeptical doubts and confirm the old belief. By Samuel Wainwright, D.D. Cloth, 12mo, 302 pp. Price, $1.00. Paper, 25 cents.

The Independent, New York: "For the hard-working student who can enjoy a fine bit of intellectual sword-play, it is the very book."

The New Womanhood.

A searching and inspiring study of the activities into which woman must enter rather than of those which she may enter. By Rev. J. C. Fernald. Cloth, 12mo, 360 pp. Price, $1.25.

The Golden Rule, Boston: "We are not acquainted with any book that even approaches this as an outline for girls and women of their true glory and work."

The By-Ways of Literature.

A bright and animated collection of essays on old things and new in customs, education, character, and literature. By David H. Wheeler. 12mo, 247 pp. Cloth, $1.00. Paper, 25 cents.

Harvard Times: "The author gives us what general history leaves unnoticed—a clear portrait of thought of the old-time English people. Their ways of thinking are brought in contrast with modern ideas."

The New Psychic Studies.

Phenomena which lie in the dim borderland between the spirit and the body, and their relations to Christian thought. By Franklin Johnson, D.D. 12mo, cloth, 91 pp. Price, 75 cents.

Church Exponent: "This is an intensely interesting work, and one which should be read by every Christian minister who would know the secret of much available power in the work of reforming men."

Finalism; or, Spiritual Materialism.

It is a keen satire, avowedly from the evolutionist's standpoint, of the most approved modern scientific dogma. Cloth, 12mo, 194 pp. 75 cents.

Boston Transcript: "It can be enjoyed by all, no matter what opinions they may hold. There is enough vivacity and vigor of style to relieve the dullness of the driest subject."

FUNK & WAGNALLS CO., Pubs., New York

Books on Sociological and Economic Topics

Helpful books for students of sociology, political economy, sociology, economics, practical Christianity, etc., etc.

The Encyclopedia of Social Reforms

This work sweeps the entire horizon of sociology and all topics directly or indirectly allied or involved. It contains the latest opinions, statistics, and other information on Sociology, Political Economy, Political Science, Wealth, Industrial Conditions and Institutions, and on all the great problems of modern civilization. Eminent authorities in the various schools of economics and social thought have set forth their pleas, enabling the reader to compare, weigh, and judge their respective claims. Edited by W. D. P. Bass, with the cooperation of the highest authorities in England and the United States. Large octavo, 1,447 pages. Net price: cloth, $7.00; sheep, $3.50; half morocco, $12.00; full morocco, $14.00.

Benjamin Kidd: "I have read through many of the important articles, and am struck with their excellence and completeness."

Dr. Albert Shaw, in The Review of Reviews: "It will stand in years to come as an epitome of social and economic conditions and the state of human progress in the last decade of the nineteenth century."

Christian Citizenship

Practical talks on the great issues of citizenship which especially command present thought and attention. Helpful to ministers, students, and thinking citizens. With an appendix containing a collection of corroborative material and illustrative facts; also a complete index. By CARLOS MARTIN. 12mo, cloth, Price, 75 cents.

Baptist Outlook, Indianapolis: "Students of Sociology will find its contents invaluable. Ministers who desire to meet the latest pulpit requirements and preach sermons of greatest helpfulness will find stored up in this volume a surprising quantity of information, suggestion, and inspiration."

Practical Christ's Sociology

A special Series of Lectures delivered before Princeton Theological Seminary. Illustrated with Charts and Twenty-Two Portraits. By Rev. WILMER F. CAFFERTY, Ph.D. 12mo, cloth, 524 pages. Price, $1.50.

THE CONTENTS.—GENERAL SUBJECT: PRACTICAL CHRISTIAN SOCIOLOGY. I. From the Standpoint of the Church; II. From the Standpoint of the Family and Education; III and IV. From the Standpoint of Capital and Labor; V. From the Standpoint of Citizenship.

Bishop John H. Vincent, D.D., LL.D.: "This book is literally packed with facts and theories and practical counsels. There is enough wisdom in it to set up a whole millennium."

Social Christianity

Twenty suggestive sermons on Social Christianity, delivered by the great preacher in St. James's Hall before immense audiences. By Rev. HENRY PRICE HAGGINS, M.A. Crown 8vo, cloth, 296 pages. Price, $1.40.

The Christian: "We find these pages uniformly practical, and in a high degree instructive."

Christian Sociology

Its object is to show the nature and relations of Christian Society, to present in compact form the controlling principles of Christian ethics, and to unfold the great socializing principles and power of practical Christianity. By Rev. J. H. W. STECKENBERG, D.D. 12mo, cloth, 370 pages. Price, $1.00.

The Interior, Chicago: "The range of topics is very wide, the author's views are everywhere sound, moderate, and practical, and the book is an able and impartial one on this subject."

Wealth and Waste

The principles of political economy in their application to the present problem of labor, law, and the liquor traffic. By A. A. HORSBURN, Ph.D. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Religious Herald: "It is a book both for scholars and students and plain laboring men."

A New Handbook on Currency and Wealth

A pocket monetary cyclopedia presenting accurate and impartial statistics and facts on coinage, wages, population, trusts, strikes, vote, productions, etc. By GEORGE B. WATSON, A.M. 16mo, flexible cloth, 50 cents; leather, $1.00.

Edward Bellamy said: "A compact collection of facts and figures with which public men, writers, and speakers should be familiar."

Bradstreet's, New York: "One of the most convenient statistical presentations with which we are acquainted."

FUNK & WAGNALLS CO., Publishers, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.